There a tradition in Mexico that pulgue was first sent it to the Emperor by the hand of his dughter, "Ostel.". The monarch tasted the liquor, then looked at the maiden, smiled, and hereupon galped it down. It not only tickled his palets, but touched his heart, and it is rep rted that he married the girl. From that day to this the Mexicans have kept themselves well supplied with pulgue, and when drinking together invariably look and smile at one an aluminum reflector, reaches an intensity of similar oustom when imbibing their whisky, and U.000 candle power. When inconlated subcutaneously it kills small birds in six minutes, and dogs and guinea-pigs in half an hour, to an hour sind a half; the symptoms in birds bring loss of coordination followed by leath, in guinez-pigs convalsions, and in the log depression, vomiting, and intoxication. Dr. lathrie describes two very lateresting observains of his own on the effect of toad's venom. He kept a small toad in a bage with some comnon lizards, and on a day a lizard; having bitten the toad, immediately afterwards rushed wildly cound the cage burrowing its head in the sand, became convulsed; and died in less than two minutes. His dog, having seized a toad, was attacked by instantaneous and profuse salivation, violent vomiting, and collapse. He also noticed that the venom has a most powerful local action on the skin, so that after carrying a toad in his hand he got numbress and tingling in it, with slight swelling and dryness of the whin lasting for several hours.

I'm bound to bear of it; and if I de. I'll come back and break every bone in your bidy, big as you are. Let's shake hands over it, Bill Weston," And then the two did shake hands over t, in the most amiceble manner. A strange thing to happen at a wedding bru kfast. you'll say; but we were very rough and very honest in Great Grimsby thirty years ago: And then Uncle Fred miled for South America and nobody ever saw him again except my Uncle Weston; and the circums appearing or which my Uncle Weston did see him were so extra rdinary that I can't do better than tell you how my two Bath Rooms. uncles—the one by blood, the other by marriage -met fifteen years after my Uncla William's wedding, long after the supposed decease of my Uncle Fred.

I was four-and-twenty. I wasn't nearly so big as my grandfather, nor even as Uncle Fred, and my uncle William Weston was taller than I was by a couple of inches; but I was a pow rful young fellow at that time, an awkward customer to tackle, and I was very ford of my Aunt Maria, who had been uncommonly kind to me. It takes a long time to drink fifteen thousand pounds; but my Aunt Muria's husband bad very mearly accomplished that feat. A select party of smack-owners, master shipwrights, dook officials, and others used to met in the parlour of the George Innevery night except Sunday, under the presidency of Rattling Bill Weston. as he was called twas in the parlour of the George that my uncle got rid of most of his £15,000: he drank it away, and he Apply to the Manager at the Depot, or to muddled it away; but he never gave any of it away—be wasn't that sort of man. For the last five years of his life my uncle was in the habit of staggering home from the George at midnight, and then he used to beat my Aunt Maria p'ained; we Clementses weren't a complaining sort. Aunt Maris would have itten her tongue out rather than divide a word of the brutality of her husba d. She didn't shriek or scream the took her nightly besting without a word; but when it was over, from her sitting nosition upon the floor she would sob out to my brute of an uncle this inv rible speech; "It's thy day now. Bill Weston; but when my brother Fred comes back he'll dust the jacket." And after the vaticination she would kneel down and say her prayers like a pions woman.

I arrived in Grimeby one night from a we k's eruise in the Lively Sally off the Dogger Bank The smack Lively Silly belonged to my grandfather, and I had taken a trip for pleasure. It was raining cats and dogs as I walked up from the quay towards home. Td get on a big penjack t. loose cilcloth overalls, fishing b ots, and Cheap Rent. a great fur cap with flaps. Now, to reach my father's house I had to pass through Jamaica aquare, at the corner of which was situated the house of my uncle, William Weston. The first floor windows of my uncle's house were brilliantly il uminated. As I crossed the square I could hear the sound of blows and of a heavy fall; my unels was evidently enjoying himself in his accustomed manner. Luddenly I heard him shout in farious tones, in the vice of a man who is mad drank, "If thy brother Fred wants to see thee slive, he'd better come back this living night! Take thee that, lass! and that! and that! I'll make short work with thee!" the voice continued, and once more I heard the sound of blows. Then there was a scream. My nucle was evidently engaged in murdering my annt. I hammered furiously at the street-door, but without result; the sound of blows and the screaming continued. I took a run at the do r and flung myself against it with all my forces; it flow op n, and I burried up the stairs. rushed into my unde's bed-reom; I saw him strike my auut down with a short old fashion d brass poker he held in his hand. Fortunately the blow missed her head or it must have killed her; as it was she fell back insensible up in the hearth-rug. There was only one course open to me. I rushed upon my uncle, who stared at me FLOOR, in astonishment, and hit him between the eyes with all my mi ht. I went straight back to the Liv h Bally; within three hours, for she had unloaded her fish, we had start donce more for the Dogger Bank I made up my mind never to return to England. I wasn't an ordinary morderer, you see. I was next door to a parricide, for I had killed me unclassard I knew perfectly well what the the verdict of a Lincolnshire jury we ld be in my case, and I wasn't quite sure that I shouldn't be accused of brutally assassinating my Annt Maria into the burgain Sometimes I thought that I would go back to Grimsby, give myself up, and expuse the crime in the u-nal manner; but consideration for my grandfather prevented that. "Poor old man," I thought, "he'd never get over the distract of it" So I determined not to a t my foot in old England again, and that Jack Clements should disappear for good. We'd be a steadily fishing on the bank for a week, when we were bailed by the Bouncing Polly. She was a bir yawl, also from
